

GEMSTONES AS A VALUE ASSET

PORTFOLIO 2020

Cut diamonds and coloured gemstones have been a popular and recognised form of investment for centuries.

This is partly due to the fact that gemstones have remained untouched from all previous financial and economic crises and, on the other hand, because of their particular mobility. A high-quality coloured gemstone (e.g. ruby or emerald) weighing 5 carats can have the same market value as a gold ingot weighing 1 kg. For this reason, gemstones have often been given the title "ideal escapewheelot".

The reason why color gemstones are still a highly interesting investment is simply explained: PROFITS! Color stones often give their owners far higher profits than diamonds can ever achieve.

What to look for when investing and purchasing coloured gemstones is something to be said here.

As with all investments, there are conservative and speculative strategies for gemstones.

Among the conservative gemstones are the three classics Ruby, Sapphire and Emerald. Everyone knows them, everyone loves them, and together they still make up by far the largest share of the world's trade in coloured stones in terms of value.

Compared to other, less known gemstones, buyers are easier to find.

Value gains are usually constant, but not too high, especially in the medium and high price range.

With high-fine qualities, however, the value gains over the last 25 years have been enormous.

Here is a selection of our best gems belonging to these three groups.
